TOWN AND COUNTY.

BREVITIES.

Mrs. J. W. Maddrell and children and Miss Lona Wickes departed for Austin yesterday morning.

Alvaro Evans, P. B. Comstock and E. P. M. Kelly, went to Carson yesterday to serve as jurors in the U. S. Court.

It is reported that Supt. Frank Free will be transferred to the Southern Pacific in Texas.

A few of the men in the railroad shops at Wadsworth intend to quit on account of the new order.

Buy a ticket for the Junior Hose ball. Charley Knust is now located at Cloverdale, Cal. He keeps a-moving.

"God bless my mother," were the last words of the man Conkling shot. Had they been uttered at the right time the man would not now be dead.

Col. Bishop returned to San Francisco on last night's train.

Mr. Roos, head of the firm of Roos Bros., Virginia, was a passenger for the Bay last night.

Supt. Yerington has entirely recovered from his late illness.

Jimmy Carrol left last night for Portland, Oregon.

In the District Court Manning and Berry, Berry and Boyd, and the First National Bank officers, are being examined in the Hatch-N. & O. suit.

Pierce Evans will leave for San Francisco to-night on a short pleasure trip.

J. C. Hagerman is improving, but there is no change for the better in J. C. Lewis' condition.

Reuben Geise is back from Boise City, Idaho. He reports well of that section, but yet he feels more at home in Reno.

Senator W. W. Hart is visiting friends in Reno. His family are still at Carson. The Senator says he is not an applicant for Supt. of the Mint, or any other Federal position in Nevada.

The Conkling shooting scrape was the general topic of conversation around town yesterday, immediately after the delivery of the Enterprise containing the account.

Prof. C. S. Young, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, has been in Reno the past two days visiting the public schools.

H. J. Matney is once again in Reno. Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Mundell, formerly of Washoe county have settled permanently on the Mundell farm, near the pleasant village of Mt. Carmel, Ohio, where they are most delightfully situated, and where they will pursue the peaceful avocations of farm life, doubtless with pleasure and profit.

Mrs. Charlie Richardson and children will leave for Washington Territory in a few days to rejoin Mr. Richardson, who is doing a good business at Walla Walla.

Gen. J. H. Mathewson came down from the Comstock last night. He will look after Internal Revenue matters today, and this evening will give our Reno Knights Templars instructions in the drill for the Triennial.

Capt. J. E. Coulter, Deputy Warden of the State Prison, came down from Verdi last evening, where he had been watching for the escaped "trusty," McMahon, whom he will take to the Prison this morning.

A Bodie Sensation.

A married man in Bodie, who works on the night shift, Friday morning found some tracks in his back yard that are to him of more interest than the prehistoric footprints at the Carson penitentiary. They are not particularly large, but that is not what worries the man who works on the night shift. He is anxious to find out who made them. Othello got madly jealous of his wife and he made things very lively about his ranch. The man on the night shift is getting his mad up, too, and "things are liable to pop" one of these days. So says the Free Press.

Palace-Arcade.

Negotiations are pending between the owners for a lease of the Arcade by the Palace, in which event the two restaurants and lodging departments will be consolidated. The Arcade saloon will be closed, and that portion of the building rented for other purposes. It is easy to see that if this arrangement is perfected, a considerable saving will be effected to all parties concerned.

Captured.

Daniel McMahon, the escaped State Prison "trusty," was found at Gannon's, near Steamboat, yesterday morning, by Frank McNair, delivered over to the officers, and will be returned to the State Prison this morning. Warden Bell will probably give him fifteen days in the dungeon.

A SAD AFFAIR.

George Conkling, of Reno, Kills a Man in New York City.

New York, March 19.

George W. Conkling, formerly employed in the office of the United States Surveyor General, in Nevada, this evening shot dead William H. Haverstick, the seducer of his sister. The tragedy took place in Paris Flat, No. 314 West Twenty-third street. Conkling arrived in this city a few days ago. Ten years ago his sister married Clem Uhler, in San Francisco. They soon quarreled and separated. Falling in with Haverstick she came to New York and lived with him in a Paris flat. Hearing of her whereabouts Conkling came to New York and obtained an interview with his sister. She promised to go West with him, but refused to live with her husband. To-night Conkling again went to see her, and was met by Haverstick, who swore the woman should not leave the house. The two men came to blows. Haverstick threw a copper statue at Conkling, who drew a revolver and fired. The ball struck Haverstick in the pit of the stomach, inflicting a wound from which he died an hour later. Conkling left the house immediately after the shooting and walked to Eighth avenue and Twenty-third street, where he surrendered himself to an officer. Uhler was a broker at No. 17 Broad street, Conkling said. Haverstick was his partner. In this way he made the acquaintance of Mrs. Uhler. When his sister saw Conkling she agreed to go with him to his Western home, and last night was the time fixed for leaving. When Conkling arrived at the house, his sister was in an inner room, and heard only the noise of the quarrel. Conkling is twenty-seven years old, and Haverstick thirty. Haverstick was a broker at No. 65 Broadway, and had lived with Mrs. Uhler about two years. Conkling was locked up. He refused to talk to reporters. He told the officers that Haverstick tried to eject him, and had thrown a number of articles at him. "In self-defense he shot him. Mrs. Uhler is said to be very pretty.

New York, March 20.

The following additional particulars of the Haverstick shooting are from the papers: J. Clement Uhler married Miss Conkling in San Francisco, where both their families are well known, and where Miss Conkling was a society belle. Uhler came to New York with his bride some years after and entered into the brokerage business. Haverstick and Laken were frequent visitors at Uhler's house, and it was noticed that Haverstick and Mrs. Uhler became fast friends; but it was long before the confiding husband realized that her friendship was of that character to do him dishonor. The result of such a discovery was separation. Mrs. Uhler left her husband's home about two years ago and went to live with her seducer. A year and a half ago Haverstick engaged apartments on the second floor of a fashionable apartment house. These apartments were fitted up in the most sumptuous style, and every luxury which money could buy was poured at the feet of Mrs. Uhler by her paramour. The pair passed among occupants of the flat as brother and sister but not without a suspicion of other relationship by the tenants, who a few days ago sent a note to the agent to request Haverstick and the woman to leave the house. Last month Conkling came East, resolved on dissolving the shameful alliance. He came to New York from Washington and yesterday was a guest at the Teland House. Soon after his arrival he found his sister and spoke earnestly to her of her folly, and told her he thought it possible her husband would be reconciled to her if she would leave Haverstick and go West for a time. She declared that reconciliation would be distasteful to her, and that she and her husband could never forget what had occurred. He would be unable to repel thoughts of the past, and she on her side would not be subservient if her sin was recalled to her. Conkling was compelled to abandon the scheme to reunite them, and he labored earnestly to separate her from Haverstick and take her West with him. He found that she was infatuated with her betrayer, but his pleadings made her waver, and a few days ago he succeeded in inducing her to leave Haverstick. It was agreed she should go to a hotel last night and to-day accompany her brother to Montana. Conkling prepared for the journey and about 9 o'clock last evening went to the hotel. It had been arranged that she was to send Haverstick away on some pretense, so that Conkling should not meet him, and that he should be ignorant of the scheme of separation; but the woman's infatuation for her paramour vanquished her good resolve, and when Conkling entered the apartments he was confronted by Haverstick, who saluted him ironically, and Conkling knew by his manner that the plot had been betrayed.

Conkling is a young man, fair-haired with an incipient moustache, and is not equal in physique to Haverstick, who was a tall, strong, swarthy man, but Conkling was not cowed. He said: "I have come to take my sister away," and he meant she should leave the house. Haverstick swore that neither she nor any of her belongings should go. The woman wavered between affection for her brother and fatal infatuation, and tried to calm both men, but they became violent and exasperated, and when Conkling boldly arraigned Haverstick for his villainy, the latter's temper burst its bonds, and seizing a Dresden-China image on the mantel hurled it at Conkling, who clapped his hand to his hip and drew a revolver and cocked it. Haverstick's wrath blinded him. He seized a companion image of the one he had just thrown and was in the act of throwing it when a pistol shot rang out and Haverstick fell, shot in the center of the body, just below the ribs. Conkling dropped the weapon and hastily left the apartments, pushing aside his sister, who was frantic with apprehension and remorse, and walking to the Grand Opera House sought an officer, and said:

"I desire to surrender myself. I have shot a man down there, and I guess he is going to die."

The police sent another officer to the Paris flats and took Conkling to the station. Meanwhile Mrs. Uhler had summoned the janitor and told him to send for a physician. Dr. Healey came and found Haverstick in a state of collapse on the floor. The wounded man said:

"A young man shot me."

He then pointed to his breast and tried to pass his hand over the board. While the doctor bent over him Haverstick said with sudden energy:

"George Conkling shot me—shot me down like a dog."

Soon after he said, faintly: "But I forgive him. He did not mean it."

Then there was a pause of several minutes, which was broken by Haverstick saying:

"God bless my mother."

These were his last words.

At the station house Conkling behaved calmly and made a statement of the shooting, and what led to it, but refused to talk to reporters. He will be taken to the Coroner's office to-day. Mrs. Uhler, after the deed, was in violent hysterics. Dr. Amidon was compelled forcibly to restrain her. She is a beautiful woman, with English cast of features and wavy brown hair. She had not been told of Haverstick's death and at intervals made inquiry about his condition, and appeared pitifully to be allowed to go to him. Mrs. Uhler sent for several acquaintances through Dr. Amidon.

The Telegram has the following: Conkling said: I was with sister all yesterday forenoon. When I went to her room last night she said: "There's that man in that room," pointing towards a curtain that separated her bedroom. "He won't let me go. I am afraid of him." I said to her: "If you wish to come with me he cannot compel you to stay here. I will speak to him. So I went into the room and saw him looking very angry. He broke out: 'I will be damned if I'll allow you to go on in this way in my own house,' and then he took off his coat and came at me as if he was going to box. I said 'All right,' and made a motion as if to undo the buttons of my overcoat. He backed towards the mantel piece and took up a figure of the shepherd and came at me with it raised in both hands, and was going to strike me on the head. Then I pulled out my revolver and fired and he fell instantly. I was so excited that I hardly remember what came next, but when I got cooled I found myself holding both his hands as he lay on the floor. He whispered, 'Will you go for a doctor?' I nodded and went outside.

AT THE CORONER'S INQUEST.

New York, March 20.

George W. Conkling, who shot and killed William H. Haverstick last night, was arraigned to-day in the Coroner's office. He is gentlemanly in appearance and bore himself outwardly with calmness and composure. The Coroner decided to begin the investigation this afternoon. Conkling's counsel claims the shooting was entirely justifiable. That the prisoner did it in defense of his sister and a justifiable effort to remove her from vicious surroundings and that it would be sustained by the universal sentiment of the community. Counsel maintained that if he had only used his fists in the assault on Conkling weapons would not have been brought into play. The prisoner remained in the custody of the police. Mrs. Uhler, the prisoner's sister, became so hysterical after the shooting she had to be removed to the hospital where she now lies in an exhausted condition.

Howe, Conkling's counsel, said that several days ago Conkling and sister came to his office and consulted with him as to the best means to sever the intimacy between him and Haverstick. When Conkling visited her last evening it was for the purpose of removing her to a place where she would have a brother's protection. When he entered and found her first words were, "Oh take me away from here, take me away." Haverstick immediately assumed the offensive.

At a recent meeting at the Tabernacle in Salt Lake, Apostle Cannon was the first speaker, and said matters looked gloomy for the Saints when Senator Edmunds introduced supplemental legislation to his anti-Polygamy law, but Jere Black, the apostle of Democracy, aided in defeating the measure, while at the same time a dinner was given by some Cabinet officer, which caused the absence of many Senators who favored the measure, and, by dilatory motions by Democratic friends, the amendment was at last defeated.

The Chicago News indulges in a little sarcasm at the expense of one of Nevada's Senators. It says that "a man named Fair, who represents Nevada in the Senate," has settled the Presidential question by naming McDonald of Indiana. The News regrets that the gentleman did not go further and save his party the trouble and expense of nominating a candidate for Vice President, but indulges the hope that "the next time Fair opens his mouth a Vice President and platform will roll out."

Time works wonders. When Alexander H. Stephens died all the State offices at Montpelier, the capital of Vermont, were closed and the National flag floated at half-mast. Twenty years ago, in the height of the Civil War, it would have been hard to make people believe that the Vice President of the Confederacy would live to be thus honored.

Dr. Pierce's "Pellets," or sugar coated granules—the original "Little Liver Pills," (beware of imitations)—cure sick and bilious headache, cleanse stomach and bowels, and purify the blood. Advice to Mothers.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhea, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle. feb. 21-sw-1-yr.
